Main Sleeping Cabin
Picture July 1998.

More accommodations was the issue of the year. Construction began a the main sleeping cabin. It was constructed to hold five to six campers without the use of bunk beds, making it the largest capacity building in camp. The second largest sleeping capacity building is the boathouse.

A new generator, a 5000 watt Kohler, was installed this year.

Bill Winslow purchased a large 306 gallon / 1158 litre water tank for $50.00 . It measures 100" long and 30" in diameter. This unit was placed on a scaffold up in the woods behind the Main Lodge creating a natural water pressure system supplying the camp with water. The smaller water tank installed on the second floor of the Main Lodge in 1938 was removed.

For the professors in the group:

Formula for volume of cylinder

Tank 100" Long x 30" Diameter
 $0.7854 \times D \times D = \text{Sq. (area of base)}$
 $\text{Sq.} \times \text{Length} = \text{Cubic (volume)}$
 $0.7854 \times 30" \times 30" = 706.86 \text{ Sq. "}$
 $706.86 \times 100" = 70686 \text{ Cubic "}$
 $231 \text{ Cubic "} = 1 \text{ gallon}$
 $70686 \div 231 = 306 \text{ Gallons}$
 $306 \text{ Gallons} \times 3.785 = 1158 \text{ litres}$
